According to the government's Housing Affordability Task Force, the Housing Ministry, and the Chief Planners of the three ~~most~~-affected regions, the removal of the Greenbelt lands was not needed to meet the government's housing goals.

Further, the Chief Planners in the regions of Durham, Hamilton and York – which are home to ~~virtually all 15 land-sites were~~ ~~of the land area~~ removed from the Greenbelt – told us that Greenbelt land was not needed to meet the current housing targets assigned to them by the Housing Ministry.
